↔ IRON WILL ↔

Tomorrow,
my husband goes to the hospital
for another test of his heart.
It seems that
just when we get a fresh start another problem arises to set us back, but we have to try
to avoid another heart attack—
for I fear he might not survive another one.
His heart is tired.
It has run on empty for so long and yet has remained amazingly strong.
I think it has been due to his iron will
that he has continued to be with us still.
Many would have given up long ago,
but he just doesn't know any way but to keep on trying.
He won't give in easily
to this business of dying.
I pray that medicine and prayers
can buy him more years.
Heaven knows I've cried enough tears!
